

Self, Identity and the IDR Cycle: Going Deeper

With Elizabeth E. Bader, Esq.

Author, “The Psychology of Mediation: Issues of Self and Identity and the IDR Cycle,” 10(2) Pepperdine Dispute Res. L. J. (2010) See www.elizabethbader.com/SelfandIdentity.pdf

Join Elizabeth Bader to explore the practical, emotional and psychological implications of the IDR cycle — the cycle of narcissistic self-inflation (overconfidence), deflation and realistic resolution that parties typically experience during the process of negotiation and mediation.

The program is offered because participants in previous programs expressed enthusiastic interest in learning more about the nuts and bolts of dealing with the IDR cycle. However, it will also be accessible to those who have not taken previous programs.

About Elizabeth Bader

Elizabeth E. Bader, Esq. is a San Francisco mediator who has mediated high-conflict disputes, some involving many parties and/or large amounts of money. She is the first person to identify and describe the IDR cycle in her forthcoming article in the Pepperdine Dispute Resolution Journal. See www.elizabethbader.com/SelfandIdentity.pdf. Elizabeth is the chair of an ABA committee on the psychology of conflict resolution, and offers trainings for practitioners on psychology and conflict resolution practice.

Registration Information

DATE AND TIME: January 29, 2010, 12:00 pm to 1:30 pm.

LOCATION: Bader Conflict Resolution Services,
580 California St., Suite 1200, San Francisco, CA

TELEPHONE: (415) 391-7272.

Email: elizabeth@elizabethbader.com.

MCLE: Approved for 1.5 hours of MCLE credit.

COST: $100; $85 if paid prior to January 15, 2010.

Payment through Paypal: Click the button at www.elizabethbader.com/events.html

Payment by Check. Send check to Elizabeth Bader at above address.

Work/Study Available. Email elizabeth@elizabethbader.com